

Innovative new service lets you reward your neighbor by rewarding yourself

Mike Dunn, president of Dunn Lumber, and the Habitat for Humanity of Seattle and South King County have turned a friendship into a successful, fulfilling and exciting endeavor. Habitat will soon open its first Home Improvement Outlet in the Seattle area. Dunn Lumber is an important contributor of new building materials that will be for sale at the Outlet.

Habitat for Humanity greatly appreciates all the financial assistance and volunteer time the community affords them to help low income earners acquire a place where they can rest their heads and call home. A home they can call their own and be proud of. A community they can embrace and will motivate them to strive for a better life.

Habitat for Humanity's Home Improvement Outlet store, with the help of Dunn Lumber will open its doors to the public in January 2008. Customers and friends of Habitat for Humanity will be able to purchase new and used building materials, furniture, appliances and more at low, discounted prices. The net proceeds from the store will then be used to building more homes.

You now have the opportunity to give while getting back. Treat yourself to a home remodeling expedition at radically discounted prices and know that all your funds are being directed back to the good of the community. Furthermore the store is a "green" store as most of the materials and goods that will be stocked in the store are excess supplies from the large stores that would otherwise go to landfills.

So by improving your home, you are improving a deserving family's home rather than a land fill!

You can find the Home Improvement Outlet at 21 South Nevada St., Seattle 98134 Call them at (206) 957-6914 or find them on the web at www.seattlehabitatoutlet.org
